New Video Highlights Benefits of Indiana's Common Construction Wage Law

Hoosier Job Creators Say CCW Law Works!

Indianapolis, June 24, 2014: A new video release highlights the value and benefit of Indiana's Common Construction Wage (CCW) law. The video, which includes interviews with various business leaders, local politicians, and academics throughout Indiana, emphasizes the benefits of the Common Construction Wage law to Indiana businesses and local communities as well as the state's overall economy.

The video, named Common Construction Wage Works!, also makes clear the fact that the Common Construction Wage issue is a bi-partisan issue since interviews take place on both sides of the political spectrum.

In addition to interviews with business leaders and elected officials, the video also includes interviews with academics familiar with the many studies that have been done on issues surrounding prevailing wage laws.

The Common Construction Wage law is Indiana's version of prevailing wage and mandates that the prevailing wages in an area be paid on public construction projects over $350,000. The video may be viewed here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gWJuzFzTJOc>
